Confront escalating complexity

The job of running a K-12 school system might be the most sensitive, openly scrutinized area in education. Every elected official, media figure, and parent has an opinion on how to run your school. And they all think it's relatively simple. But you know, from experience, that the task is getting more complex every school year. In today's environment, there's no substitute for software solutions focused clearly on the distinct demands of the K-12 environment to maintain sound finances, manage facilities effectively, and deliver first-rate educational outcomes.
